

Peer Connect

Helping Queenslanders navigate the challenges of cancer together

A cancer diagnosis can feel overwhelming, but you should never have to face it alone. Peer Connect offers confidential one-on-one phone support at no cost to Queenslanders.

Our trained peer mentors are here to listen, chat, share practical advice from their own experience, and help you find trusted information and resources. We support people from all backgrounds, including First Nations people, LGBTQIA+ communities, people living with disabilities, and those from diverse cultural backgrounds.

The program is open to anyone 18 or over who has been impacted by cancer. You can access up to six sessions with each peer mentor you connect with.

Become a Peer Connect volunteer

We're looking for compassionate people with personal experience with cancer, either as a patient or carer, to join the team as a volunteer peer mentor.

Your support will help Queenslanders feel heard, understood, and supported during a challenging time.

Peer Connect is a free, confidential phone support program that connects people living with cancer to trained peer mentor who understand what they're facing.

All volunteers receive comprehensive training and ongoing guidance.

"I'm paying it forward by help others, just as someone helped me when I felt all hope was lost."
